The bad news is time flies. The good news is you're the pilot." - Michael Altshuler

What do people who LOVE their lives do differently?

Paul Hudson wrote a great article about the people who love their lives. He believes that these are the qualities they develop and the way they live their lives.

- "They don't bother trying to make others like them — mainly because they don't care if they're liked.
- They do things because they want to do them, not because they believe they have to do them.
- They love their friends but don't rely on them.
- When you ask them what they do, they don't give you a job title.
- When you ask them where they live, they say, "At the moment..."
- They have their own philosophies, their own religion they created and live by.
- They embrace their impermanence.
- They see the world as their playhouse and their mind as the conductor.
- They live in the moment, but dream in the future.
- They don't bother changing others, but instead learn how to deal with them appropriately."

I think he's spot on, and these are some of the attitudes, disciplines, intentions and ways of being that I would like to be helping you develop in your life!
